“ My father. I am the daughter that loved you so much you "felt you had to stay away because it was too painful for both of us." The memories of you and my mother, your wife, Dora Opal Warren when we lived in your parents' laundromat are both happy memories and painful memories. Then Fritch. I waited too long for you to come back. Impossible for them to deny I was your one and only real daughter. I remember your parents with love. You and your father were bigger than life to me. It's painful we lost all that. I love you, daddy.
