“ I miss you uncle Mark I sure do miss you. Heaven is probably a little bit more technologically advanced since you got there. I can only imagine the joyous reunion you have had with Papa, Nana and all your Aunt's and Uncle's (hug them for me). I'm sure you are updating Uncle Travis on all the new technology that has come around in the last 20 years. Lord knows he is the only one up there that could understand what you are talking about, unless you have found Einstein maybe just maybe he would get it Nah probably not. Love You Man.

Until I make it to that spiritual building eternal in the heavens.-SO MOTE IT BE

“ I met Mark when he come to work at Pumpco several years back. He was the smartest man I had ever met. His nickname became "NASA" after he started telling his stories about working for Sea Launch putting rockets in space. In our office he would sometimes tell me "I never worked for NASA but I could have" then he would laugh his very distinct laugh of his. I could sit and listen to his stories for hours. Either about working on rockets, his life growing up, about the Mason's or his family. He was passionate about it all. Just recently Mark and I had started discussing flying quad copters. I think Mark dabbled in a little bit of everything. He truly was an amazing man I will miss him dearly.

“ Cousin Mark was always an interesting person. I remember as kids all the times we visited Uncle Dub and Aunt Betty and Billy Earl, Mark, Laura, Sarah and Paul. Later I remember Mark and his Mazda. He had an unreal stereo system in it and boy could that car fly! Then he went into computers and I visited him when he worked at the Ft Worth Star-Telegram in charge of all their computers. The guy was a computer whiz! Then he went into the aerospace business. I remember his pictures of different launches from all over the world. He was so intelligent in so many fields. Unfortunately, we didn't see each other as much later in life.as we both got married and sort of drifted apart. But I'll always love the big fella! Love you Mark and hope to see you again someday!
