“ Mason from the first day I met you I was told I was crazy for letting a stranger move in with me. I learned a lot about you when you were there. You always had a front like nothing ever bothered you but when you brought your walls down. I soon realized how amazing of a person you were. I always hoped that one day you could see what me and mini me saw. I know you had things going for you and you spoke so much about all the good things you had going on. My thoughts and prayers to his family, and friends that he leaves behind.

We will miss the many days of throwing darts and I'll miss having you come over and you guys sit around and tell jokes for hours. Your smile was contagious and I'll miss you coming over and feeding you. Only God knows what was going on in your mind, and thats between you and him. Just know we love you and were never here to judge you. May you R.I.P and never be forgotten.*

“ I still can't understand why you chose to give up. You were so full of life and that smile of yours was contagious. I do not know what passed through your mind as you passed away from here, I can only hope the storm that became your end, is now not only bright and full of light, but peaceful as well. You will be missed more then you ever realized, and you cheated not only those that love you, but yourself as well. We all feel alone and look around waiting for the world to collapse upon us, but there were brighter days ahead.. I want to be angry with you for leaving the way you did, you were not meant for this, but I do not know the answers to the million questions you left us with.. Mason, the tattoo across your shoulders represented how you felt about yourself and how I seen you no matter the circumstances. I do not want to say goodbye to a young man that walked into my life by chance, so I will close with this..God be with this family and those that love him, may everyone find closure and even one day peace. Mason, may you soar peacefully in the wind my friend...
Much love Sharla
